

Five Videos Added to the Art Therapy in Action Series

AATA National Office
December 7, 2017

The AATA has released five additional videos to its series, Art Therapy in Action.

The newest videos include interviews on the following topics:

- Medical - Irene Rosner David, PhD, ATR-BC, LCAT, HLM on the evolution of art therapy in medicine and working with people in hospital settings.
- Neuroscience - Juliet King, MA, ATR-BC, LPC, LMHC on the intersection of art therapy and neuroscience.
- Social Justice - Catherine Hyland Moon, MA, ATR-BC, on art therapy through the lenses of social justice, inclusivity, and understanding of human and group interaction.
- Autism Spectrum Disorder - Donna Betts, PhD, ATR-BC on art therapy as a transitional tool, a social support, and a means of expression for people diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder.
- Then and Now - Judy Rubin, PhD, ATR-BC, HLM on her experiences as a pioneer of art therapy and the changes in the profession over time.

In our video series, Art Therapy in Action, thoughtleaders in the field talk about how the unique and integrative properties of art therapy can enrich lives, support personal and relational treatment goals, address community concerns, and advance societal and ecological change. Don't miss the other videos in the series that cover compelling topics within art therapy including: adolescents, children in hospital settings, culture and community, eating disorders, the LGBTQIA community, memory care, military service members & veterans, prisons & other correctional facilities, research, and trauma.

Find the Art Therapy in Action page under the "About Art Therapy" tab on our website.

