

Congratulations to Dr. Jane Lindsay Miller, ASPE's 2016 Outstanding Educator!

By Kris Slawinski, Pritzker School of Medicine, University of Chicago

Dr. Jane Lindsay Miller, Ph.D., is this year's recipient of the Outstanding Educator Award. Dr. Miller is currently Director of the AHC Simulation Center and Interprofessional Education and Research Center at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. Her contributions to medical education include curriculum development, research, academic advising, professional development and evaluation, educational leadership and administration, and much more. Her numerous awards, honors, and invited lectures attest to a high level of accomplishment.

Dr. Miller is a recognized leader in all facets of simulation and particularly in interprofessional education and evaluation. She is highly respected for her talents not only at her own institution, but also nationally and internationally. Additionally, Jane has contributed regularly as a presenter at the annual ASPE meetings and we are proud to count her as a valued member of the ASPE community. Congratulations to Dr. Miller!
